

Process a visa, in one click.

"Through innovations in technology and business strategy, we prioritise unlocking new value for our partners and providing our users with the best and most seamless travel experience possible."

Jane Sun, CEO of Trip.com Group

To the Trip.com team,

A Trip.com customer already books the flight, the hotel, and the ride in one place. The visa is the only piece missing, the one step travelers still handle on their own.

Ellis closes that gap. It is an AI agent that fills out and submits the visa application for the user in one click. The user uploads their documents, and Ellis does the rest. That saves travelers a lot of time, and nobody is left to work out the process alone.

Ellis solves captchas, performs the payment on the embassy website, and completes the application, all within seconds. It also schedules the visa appointment through Trip.com, helps renew an expired passport, monitors the immigration process 24/7, and includes an AI chatbot for immigration questions throughout the trip. The traveler simply lets Trip.com do the job. The future of traveling is AI powered; the old way of handling visa processing yourself is ending.

With Ellis, Trip.com can sell the full package. Instead of leaving the website to pay the embassy, the customer pays Trip.com to perform the visa processing. That keeps users on Trip.com and improves retention.

Ellis is the first of its kind, the first ever global visa processing tool. It does not run on tokens; Ellis runs its own specialized AI model locally on the server, so there are no AI usage costs. Travelers cannot find this anywhere else. General AI tools like Kimi K3 or ChatGPT will decline this work under their privacy guidelines, and they are not agents anyway. Ellis is how Trip.com stands apart from every competitor.

We would be glad to give Trip.com a free trial to test the software. I would also love to show you a live visa processing session using a real Chinese passport.

Let's revolutionize the traveling process for our customers and give them the full package, from transportation to immigration.
